Few questions....

Is it the study of how medicine is practiced by doctors, nurses, or traditional health-care systems actually work?

Is it the study of what it feels like to be sick?

Is it the study of how diseases in different societies are treated?

What is the application of cultural knowledge to the actual treatment of diseases?

Invited Lecture by Dr. Sovanjan Sarkar, Assistant Professor of Anthropology, Vidyasagar University

Some more points----

- The nature of our data collection techniques does have an effect on the future researchers
- We should avoid treating respondents and others in such a way that it discredits the research enterprise
- We need to properly acknowledge the contribution of other colleagues
- Avoiding overstating our expertise with particular methodology
- No over-claiming what can be learned and applied from the research or particular methodology
- Making the sponsors aware of the limitations of the study
