CLASSIFICATION ON CULTURAL ATTRIBUTES

According to Verrier Elwin tribes of India can be classified into four types based on cultural contacts

- those who are most primitive, lives a joint communal life and cultivate with axes;
- those who, though equally attached to their solitude and ancient traditions, are more individualistic, less occupied with axe cultivation;
- those, the most numerous, who under external influence are already on the way out by the loss of their tribal culture, religion, and social organization;
- the tribes like Bhil and Naga, who retain much of their original tribal life and who have won the battle of culture contact.
