Preface

It is predicted that travel and tourism will be one of the world's highest growth sectors in the present century. Tourism is unique in involves industry without smoke, education, without class room integration without legislation and diplomacy without formality.

Field work report is an essential element for any professional subject. Specially incise of tourism management student .it is an important part of making future. A student of tourism management can make his future through field work project. The subject is depending on totally practical.

According to our 3rd year syllabus we have to submit a field work report to the department of tourism and travel management under Vidyasagar university.

Natural tourism is an important and growing segment of the travel industry, with more and more people seeking sustainable and responsible ways to explore and experience natural environments. As such, it is essential to assess the impact of natural tourism on the environment and local communities, as well as the effectiveness of the measures taken to promote sustainability and conservation.

This field report aims to provide an overview of natural tourism and its impact on a specific location, as well as the efforts made by local authorities and tourism operators to promote sustainable and responsible practices. Through observations, interviews, and analysis of data and literature, this report aims to provide insights into the current state of natural tourism in the selected location, and to offer recommendations for further improvement and development of this important industry.

The findings and recommendations of this report can be valuable for tourism operators, policymakers, and other stakeholders in the natural tourism industry, as they seek to balance economic growth and environmental conservation while providing unique and authentic travel experiences for visitors.

According to our 3rd Year syllabus we have to submit a fieldwork report to the department of Tourism & Travel Management under Vidyasagar University.

Ecotourism is a form of sustainable tourism that aims to minimize the negative impact of tourism on the environment and maximize the benefits to local communities. It involves responsible travel to natural areas that conserves the environment, sustains the well-being of the local people, and involves interpretation and education.

An ecotourism project is a tourism initiative that is designed to promote and facilitate responsible travel to natural areas. It may involve the development of eco-friendly accommodations, the establishment of nature trails and guided tours, and the implementation of environmental and cultural education programs. The goal of an ecotourism project is to provide tourists with a unique and authentic experience while also contributing to the conservation of the natural environment and the socio-economic development of local communities.

Ecotourism is a unique natural attraction in tourism. There are so many foreign tourists or domestic tourist visit and experience the Indian ecotourism site area over the year. I have choose this topic for my project because ecotourism attraction is playing a very major roll in tourism, day from a long time ago and it is increasing day by day.

Preface

It is predicted that travel and tourism will be one of the world's highest growth sectors in the present century. Tourism is unique in involves industry without smoke, education, without class room integration without legislation and diplomacy without formality.

Field work report is an essential element for any professional subject. Specially incise of tourism management student .it is an important part of making future. A student of tourism management can make his future through field work project. The subject is depending on totally practical.

According to our 3rd year syllabus we have to submit a field work report to the department of tourism and travel management under Vidyasagar university.

Cuisine tourism has gained significant popularity in recent years as travellers increasingly recognize the importance of food as a key aspect of the travel experience. It goes beyond simply eating and nourishing oneself; it is about immersing oneself in the culture, history, and traditions of a place through its cuisine.

This field report aims to provide an overview of cuisine tourism and its impact on a specific location, as well as the efforts made by local authorities and tourism operators to promote sustainable and responsible practices. Through observations, interviews, and analysis of data and literature, this report aims to provide insights into the current state of cuisine tourism in the selected location, and to offer recommendations for further improvement and development of this important industry.

According to our 3rd Year syllabus we have to submit a fieldwork report to the department of Tourism & Travel Management under Vidyasagar University.

The Eco-tourism in India is a wonderful attraction on the country's diversity and multi- cultural activity. Over the years, India has not only emerged as a major economic power but also an one of the most popular travel destination in the world. In India ecotourism involves visiting fragile, pristine, and relatively untouched natural areas, with the intention to support conservation efforts. One observes the flora and fauna in their natural environment and cause as little impact as possible.

Ecotourism or tourism in a sustainable manner can potentially enhance the livelihood of local people, particularly those living in and around ecologically fragile areas and, as a result, also provide local people an incentive to conserve these areas.

Indigenous and local communities have raised concerns and even resisted the onslaught of such development of ecotourism at international, regional, national and state levels. On the other hand, there are also instances of communities cautiously using ecotourism as a means to augment their sources of livelihood and income. So, I choose ecotourism for my project because Ecotourism attraction is playing a very major part in tourism today and it is increasing day by day.

Some of the popular adventure activities in Meghalaya are ziplining, rappelling, waterfall rappelling, canyoning, freshwater scuba diving, paddling, caving, and good-old-fashioned camping. The best seasons for water-related activities are post-monsoon and winter.

Camping is an all-year activity depending on the campsite and accessibility of your route, although for those who have limited experience in the outdoors it is recommended that you avoid the ferocious monsoon season.

Meghalaya is also a favoured destination for mountain bikers and motorcycle enthusiasts – the dirt trails coursing through the highlands and valleys and the smooth and winding scenic highways provide a perfect stage.

INTRODUCTION

Meghalaya, a Sanskrit word meaning "the abode of cloud", was created as an autonomous State on 2nd April 1970. The full-fledged State of Meghalaya came into existence on 2nd January 1972. Meghalaya has precise historic, geographic and strategic significance for India. It is bound on north and east by the state of Assam, and on south and west by Bangladesh. The three physical division in the state are Garo (Western), Khasi (Central) and Jaintia (Eastern) hill divisions.

In the Garo hills, the Tura range occupies dominantly a middle portion running west to east where the Nokrek peak is located. Khasi -Jaintia ranges are intertwined with a curved-alignment. Spurs of ranges in Jaintia hills are shorter in height than the Shillong Plateau; hillbases lie side by side with flat lands, valley and meadows.

Meghalaya is endowed with a rich variety of flora and fauna. Of about 17,000 species of orchids in the world, around 3000 varieties are found in Meghalaya. A botanical wonder, the pitcher plant, an insect eating plant is found in the district of Jaintia hills, West Khasi hills and South Garo hills of the state. Animals and birds that are found in the state are elephants, tigers, bear, jackal, leopard, golden langur etc .

The interesting birds found in the state include Hornbills, King Vulture, Crested Serpent, Eagle, Partridges, Teals, Snipes, Quails etc.

ABOUT TOURISM

Tourism refers to the activity of individuals traveling to and staying in places outside their usual environment for leisure, business, or other purposes. It involves visiting destinations, experiencing new cultures, trying different cuisines, and engaging in various recreational activities.

Tourism is a significant economic contributor to many countries and regions around the world. It creates jobs, generates income, and stimulates the growth of other industries such as transportation, hospitality, and entertainment.

Tourism can be categorized into several types, including domestic tourism (traveling within one's own country), international tourism (traveling to a foreign country), cultural tourism (visiting historical and cultural sites), ecotourism (traveling to natural areas while conserving the environment), and adventure tourism (engaging in challenging physical activities).

However, tourism can also have negative impacts, such as environmental degradation, cultural homogenization, and over tourism. Over tourism occurs when too many tourists visit a destination, causing overcrowding, strain on resources, and damage to local communities and ecosystems.

To promote sustainable tourism, it is essential to balance the economic benefits of tourism with environmental and social responsibility. This involves promoting responsible travel practices, supporting local businesses, and protecting cultural and natural heritage sites.

ABOUT ECO-TOURISM

Eco
Concept

Ecotourism is a form of tourism involving responsible travel (using sustainable transport) to natural areas, conserving the environment, and improving the well-being of the local people. Its purpose may be to educate the traveler, to provide funds for ecological conservation, to directly benefit the economic development and political empowerment of local communities, or to foster respect for different cultures and for human rights. Since the 1980s, ecotourism has been considered a critical endeavour by environmentalists, so that future generations may experience destinations relatively untouched by human intervention. Ecotourism may focus on educating travellers on local environments and natural surroundings with an eye to ecological conservation. Some include in the definition of ecotourism the effort to produce economic opportunities that make conservation of natural resources financially possible.

Generally, ecotourism deals with interaction with biotic components of the natural environments. Ecotourism focuses on socially responsible travel, personal growth, and environmental sustainability. Ecotourism typically involves travel to destinations where flora, fauna, and cultural heritage are the primary attractions. Ecotourism is intended to offer tourists an insight into the impact of human beings on the environment and to foster a greater appreciation of our natural habitats. Ecotourism aims at minimal environmental impact on the areas visited. Besides fostering respect towards the natural environment, ecotourism also helps in creating socio-economic benefits for the communities of the area visited.

Responsible ecotourism programs include those that minimize the negative aspects of conventional tourism on the environment and enhance the cultural integrity of local people. Therefore, in addition to evaluating environmental and cultural factors, an integral part of ecotourism is the promotion of recycling, energy efficiency, water conservation, and creation of economic opportunities for local communities. For these reasons, ecotourism often appeals to advocates of environmental and social responsibility.

Many consider the term "ecotourism", like "sustainable tourism" (which is a related concept but broader), an oxymoron. Like most long-distance travel, ecotourism often depends on air transportation, which contributes to climate change. Additionally, "the overall effect of sustainable tourism is negative where like ecotourism philanthropic aspirations mask hard-nosed immediate

Benefits of Eco-tourism

Ecotourism is a sub-component of the field of sustainable tourism. Ecotourism must serve to maximize ecological benefits, while contributing to the economic, social and cultural wellbeing of communities living close to ecotourism venues. Potential ecological, economic and sociocultural benefits associated with ecotourism are described below.
